Handsome cat

Cocooned in her blanket She asks again If I've seen the kitten's photo Framed at her bedside

He's a big tabby now And you should see his markings You should see him now He is such a handsome cat

All alone in a four bed ward Her youth stolen by tainted blood Now cancer invades her All alone, no one visits

Oncology promised to assess her No notes in the chart They haven't come We remind them once again

With each day Her will drains She barely eats And it grows

Twice more We do our dance As her walker gathers dust As hope fades

Have you seen him? You should see him now You should see his markings He's such a handsome cat

Kevin Dueck

Correspondence to Kevin Dueck, McMaster University Department of Family Medicine, David Braley Health Sciences Centre, Hamilton, Ontario L8P 1H6, Canada; Kevin.Dueck@Medportal.ca

Competing interests None declared.

Provenance and peer review Not commissioned; internally peer reviewed.

To cite Dueck K. Med Humanit 2017;43:e30. Published Online First 2 May 2017 Med Humanit 2017;43:e30. doi:10.1136/medhum-2017-011254

