On Viewing a Portrait by Otto Dix

A broad schmiss across his cheek,
full lips, pursed
as if to suppress a smile,
Dr. Hans Koch wears pince nez,
a white coat, collar up,
sleeves rolled to the elbows.

Standing by a chair with metal stirrups,
a white tiled room, instruments
scattered on a nearby table, he waits –
a tourniquet in one hand, glass syringe in the other,
its long needle facing me.

And I am twelve once again,
as my father looks up,
a syringe in his hand when I come in,
back from a ball game, his black bag
open on the kitchen table.

“This is for you! There’s a polio epidemic.
You need gamma globulin, 5 cc in each butt.”

He took care of us all. I hated his office,
the pungent smells, bright examination light,
the stranger he became
with his white coat, his mirrored monocle
through which he gazed at me.

“Stop whining,” as he filled the syringe.
“You need this. Let’s get on with it!”

Richard Bronson

Correspondence to Richard Bronson, Department of Obstetrics & Gynecology, Stony Brook University Medical Center, T9-080, Stony Brook, New York, 11794-8091, USA; Richard.Bronson@Stonybrookmedicine.edu

Competing interests None.

Provenance and peer review Not commissioned; internally peer reviewed.

To cite Bronson R. Med Humanit Published Online First: [please include Day Month Year] doi:10.1136/medhum-2016-011160
On Viewing a Portrait by Otto Dix

Richard Bronson

Med Humanities published online January 24, 2017

Updated information and services can be found at:
http://mh.bmj.com/content/early/2017/01/24/medhum-2016-011160

These include:

Email alerting service
Receive free email alerts when new articles cite this article. Sign up in the box at the top right corner of the online article.

Notes

To request permissions go to:
http://group.bmj.com/group/rights-licensing/permissions

To order reprints go to:
http://journals.bmj.com/cgi/reprintform

To subscribe to BMJ go to:
http://group.bmj.com/subscribe/